

THE LILAC TRAIL

On the last weekend in May, a special event takes place in the tiny village of Warkworth, Ontario. Surrounded by a thriving farming community, the town has a rich history of elaborate flower displays. Through community involvement and love of nature, the lilac festival was born. Volunteers helped build a lilac trail, with a display of sixty plus varieties of flowers planted beside a meandering creek. This trail is the highlight of the weekend festivities. Walking the lilac trail, one loses themselves in the fragrant odours of this special spring flower, which unfortunately blooms only once a year.

WILLIAM STANLEY